

With broadband available over dsl phone lines, cable, and satellite, broadband over powerlines is overkill. The prospect of interference to radio reception (AM, FM, and shortwave) and possible interference to satellite TV reception should be enough to put this mode of broadband on the shelf, especially with all of the other options available.